Thanksgiving Day Feast Enjoyed by City Newsboys

One Hundred and Fifty-three Dine as Guests of Rotary Club at Advance Restaurant—Good Things to Eat Supplemented With Good Talks.

Where Manager Reade of the Advance Restaurant secured enough turkeys to satisfy the appetites of 153 healthy, normal boys remains a mystery but that is what he did Wednesday evening, Thanksgiving Eve, when the Rotary Club of this city was host to the newsboys of the city at the Advance Restaurant.

At 6:30 o'clock the boys who deliver the newspapers to the readers of the city assembled at the Advance where they were met by the Rotary club committee headed by Michael Oberfald and assisted by Frank P. Messinger, who acted as toastmaster and master of ceremonies, Arthur Church, E. Frank Flanagan, James Byrne, William O'Reilly and Samuel Scudder, Jr. The boys were escorted to the dining room of the restaurant where every available table was occupied by them.

Appetites Sharpened by Work.

The affair was a success from the word "go," the boys having scarcely been seated when a lively tune was taken up and soon the room was filled with the song of a hundred boys. After a couple of songs had been disposed of a waitress made her appearance at the dining room door and was greeted by a long and healthy shout from the boys. Appetites made keen by an hour's walk in delivering evening papers made the turkey dinner which followed disappear with an uncanny speed, but there was plenty of it and every one of the boys was given a most generous portion of the good things which usually accompany a turkey dinner served at Thanksgiving time.

Pranks and Songs.

In between mouthfuls the boys engaged in good natured "kidding" and of course there were the usual pranks which accompany any gathering of lively boys. Between courses while the dishes were being gathered up there were songs by the boys with Sam Scudder at the piano. The singing was led by Mr. Messinger but the youths did not need much leading when it came to the popular songs of the day. They all indulged and enjoyed the opportunity of giving vent to some of their enthusiasm.

From time to time as the dinner progressed patrons of the restaurant came to the door and looked in on the happy throng of youngsters. All expressed themselves as to the excellent behavior of the boys and commented on the bright, intelligent expressions of delight which lighted their faces.

Morris Tells Experiences.

After everything else had been disposed of and the ice cream was being served, Mr. Messinger called the boys to order and told them that there was one of their number who had something to say. Donald Morris, a young boy, arose and in a voice which could be heard in every corner of the room, thanked the members of the Rotary Club for the dinner in behalf of the newsboys of the city. He injected some comedy into his talk when he referred to a certain night when walking was bad and he had been tempted to "skip" some of his customers who lived a little out of the way. He told of the result when he arrived home and heard the telephone summon him back to deliver a paper some distance from home and of the second call which was received shortly after he arrived home from his first trip. He told how he managed to avoid delivering it and how the customer received the paper, much to the delight of the other boys.

An Ideal Dream.

He then proceeded to tell what he would do if he were editor of a paper. There never would be any twenty-four page papers to lug around in a deep snow, papers would always be early and be delivered on time, the newsboys would be given every consideration and anyone who interfered with the early delivery of the papers to the carrier would be "fired."

Young Morris's talk was full of pep and carried with it an air of comedy which was appreciated and understood by all newsboys.

Little Arthur Burns sang some songs and was greeted with enthusiasm by his fellows.

Captain Fowler's Talk.

Captain Everett Fowler was then introduced by Mr. Messinger and told the boys some interesting things which every boy should remember. Captain Fowler's address, he said, was not in the nature of a lecture and as he proceeded it developed that it was not. The boys enjoyed the comedy which he introduced and gave serious thought to some of the more serious things which he said. He told the boys that he considered it an honor to speak before the newsboys of the city for in so doing he was addressing the men of tomorrow.

In the assemblage he might be addressing some future governor or president of the United States. Many of the prominent men of today carried papers and from the ranks of the carriers had come some of the largest men in the country today. He cautioned the boys not to forget that the boy of today is the man of tomorrow and that fun was fun and all boys wanted fun but that fun ceased when damage was done. He cautioned them that it was fun to go out on Hallowe'en and ring door bells and have a good time but that fun ceased when property was destroyed.

Consider the Poor.

He told them that they should always have every consideration for the poor. That a man was poor was no reflection on his character. No one should ever make fun of a man because he is poor and he said that probably many of the boys at the dinner would not make fun of a person who was poor and unfortunate but there were some who would and did. Whenever a boy sees another doing this he should try and show the other his wrong.

Proud of Kingston.

Captain Fowler stated that although he was not an old man and did not want to be so considered, still he had in his life traveled much and seen many things which made him old in experience. He said that in his travels he had always been glad to return to Kingston, a town which he considered unequalled. He told the boys some of the interesting historical points of the city and explained to them that their own home town was one of the most historic cities of the country and state. It was in Kingston that the first constitution of the state was adopted. The first governor of the state was inaugurated here and the city had a wealth of interesting historical facts which should be known to every boy to thoroughly appreciate his home town.

In closing he urged the boys to listen to the advice of their parents, their teachers and to continue to observe the law and authority and at all times conduct themselves in a manner which will be a credit to themselves and others.

Close With Song, and Cheers.

At the conclusion of the address by Captain Fowler the boys indulged in a song and then gave three cheers for the Rotary Club and with one more song the boys departed for their home in the various sections of the city. During the serving of the dinner and the speaking which followed the boys conducted themselves in a most gentlemanly manner and at the conclusion left the restaurant in a most orderly manner.

Briand Busy in Forming Cabinet

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, Nov. 27.—Having apparently broken the strangle hold of the Left Bloc upon French politics, M. Briand is today actively engaged in forming a French cabinet.

For the eighth time in a long and varied political career, M. Briand will become premier of France.

M. Briand is expected to retain the portfolio for foreign affairs in his own cabinet, possibly later retiring from the premiership in order to devote all of his time to foreign affairs.

By skillful maneuvering M. Briand appears to have brought a schism between M. Herriot's Radical Socialists and the Socialists, which is sufficient to break the full strength of the Left Bloc. Thus he appears to be in a fair way to be successful in forming a government of the Centre parties, which can successfully withstand the demands of the Socialists.

The critical post in the Briand cabinet will be the ministry of finance. M. Briand is said to be desirous of offering this post to either Louis Loucher or Senator Paul Doumer. M. Loucher has long been friendly to the Socialists, however, and he might draw the fire of the dyed in the wool Socialists.

Possibly by evening M. Briand will be able to present the names of his cabinet to President Doumergue.

Millonig to Take West Shore Hotel

Henry Millonig, well known hotel keeper of 97 Clinton avenue, this city, on Monday next will take over the West Shore Hotel on Railroad avenue. Mr. Millonig has been for several years conducting hotels in Kingston and also in Lanesville, Greene county. He for some time managed the Hotel Eichler and later purchased, reconstructed and modernized the City Hotel on Main street, now conducted by Myer & Tuck, making it a success in every way, the restaurant being largely patronized because of the excellence of the cuisine, home cooked and served under the direction of Mrs. Millonig.

Confessions in Bomb Outrages

Missiles Were Placed at Prices Ranging from $2 up, According to Chicago Police—Special Grand Jury Sumoned to Make Investigation.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 27.—Chief Justice Thomas Lynch of the criminal court today issued a call for a special grand jury to assemble at 10 o'clock Monday morning for the sole purpose of investigating bomb outrages.

Judge Lynch took action immediately on being informed by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe that alleged confessions of Mrs. Fred Schrock Rice, and two men involved business men, prominent in Chicago, certain organizations and groups of gangsters.

Crowe told International News Service he expected 12 arrests before morning.

Paid for Planting Bombs.

Amazing confessions detailing how a group of bombers, led by a woman, planted explosive missiles throughout Chicago and environments, at prices ranging from $2 a bomb up, were obtained today by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe from the woman and some of her associates.

Woman Makes Main Confession.

Mrs. Lena Schrock Rice, 23, mother of three children, who was arrested yesterday just after she had put a bomb on the threshold of a hardware store made the principal confession. She told how she and her associates had been hired by various individuals and organizations who wanted bombing done. She furnished names and dates to the headquarters. She is the wife of Fred Rice of Battle Creek, Mich. She left him some time ago.

Other Confessions Follow.

Fred Wamquist, one of the men caught with her, was the first to confess. Joe Avanazio, captured by police after he had fled from the bombing in an automobile, confessed after he had maintained for hours that he knew nothing and was an innocent spectator. Jack Davis, former president of the Barber's Union, also admitted a part in several bombings.

May Explain Forty Bombings.

"We believe we have cleared up more than forty bombings in Chicago and nearby towns during the last three months," Crowe said. "More arrests are coming and I think when we are through arresting we will find that there will be no more bombings for a while."

"We already have confessions involving a number of persons and organizations and drawing into the net a number of notorious gangsters," he added. "The information is startling and shows that some persons, considered above suspicion, were interested in doing damage to the homes and property of those they did not like."

Woman Planted the Bombs.

Mrs. Rice and Wamquist both said that she always planted the bombs. The gang used an automobile to carry bombs to a location near the building they were to damage. Then she and Wamquist left the car and she carried the bomb underneath her cape.

Chicago Bandits Shoot to Kill

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 27.—One policeman was killed another probably wounded, a taxicab driver was killed and a civilian wounded when four bandits, declared by police to have been led by Martin Durkin, fugitive slayer, entered a South Side cigar store today and opened fire on those inside.

Police had been watching the place several days on information they had that Durkin would be caught there. After the shooting the bandits escaped in an automobile they had left near the store.

The dead are: Policeman James Carroll and Benjamin Custer, taxicab driver.

Policeman James Henry was the officer wounded. August Schneider, who happened to be in the store was shot.

Carroll, inside when the bandits entered, returned their fire and put up a desperate fight. He fought until he had emptied his revolver. He was found dead behind a stove.

According to three men in the store at the time the bandits entered with drawn pistols, ordered those inside to back up against a wall, and started shooting when Officer Carroll drew his gun and commenced to fire. Then they commenced backing out.

Henry, outside, heard shots and rushed to the store. He fired at the bandits and they fired back. Wounded, he declared, he recognized Durkin as one of the gunmen.

Custer, the taxi driver, was in the store near Carroll and was killed during the battle between the bandits and the policeman.

Nation's Tax Bill Nearly Ten Billion

Federal Government Costs Approximately One-Third of Enormous Total—Relief in Taxation Must Come From Local Sources.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Nov. 27.—American taxpayers will contribute, directly and indirectly, close to $10,000,000,000 to the support of federal, state, county and municipal governments in the year ending next June, according to estimates compiled by the treasury experts today.

This enormous amount constitutes what is known as the nation's tax bill.

The Federal Government.

Treasury figures disclosed that the federal government will cost the people approximately $3,500,000,000, exclusive of postal expenses for the year.

President Coolidge has asked the federal departments to keep within a limit of $3,375,000,000, but it was learned today that in spite of economy policies operation of the government will cost slightly over that figure.

Relief Must Be Local.

With federal expenses accountable for about one third of the total cost of all governments in the country, high officials are turning to the states and cities for cooperation in the general drive against waste. A material chop at government operating costs will be of vital assistance in the campaign of the administration in bringing about a more scientific conduct of all business, but the majority of the relief will have to come from local sources, as will be pointed out in the president's message.

Economy Basis For Prosperity.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover has obtained the approval of the president in his campaign against wasteful practices in production. If the government succeeds in applying these economic rules to all government, officials believe that a long step will have been taken in laying a basis for permanent national prosperity.

Nation's Growth Adds to Cost.

Federal budget experts have been unable to keep ordinary expenditures within the cost limit of last year. A survey of official reports shows that an end has been reached to governmental cost cutting because of the enormous growth of the country's official business.

Figures from July 1 to Thanksgiving showed that ordinary expenses have been $1,234,068,000 about $23,000,000 heavier than last year.

THANKSGIVING DAY DINNERS ENJOYED BY EVERYONE

One hundred and sixty Thanksgiving Day dinners were served Thursday at the Hotel Stuyvesant and about forty who could not wait to obtain a seating because the tables were occupied went elsewhere.

The City Hotel and the Kirkland served a number of family parties with turkey dinners, and the Advance, McCabe's, Liberty, Lyons's and other restaurants and lunch rooms that served special Thanksgiving dinners were largely patronized.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

The Reichstag passed an enabling bill providing for the German signature to the Locarno pacts.

The ratification puts an end to one of the bitterest political fights Germany has seen since the creation of the German republic.

Chancellor Luther and his cabinet are expected to resign immediately after the pacts are signed, they being agreed to this course as a price of Reichstag support of strong factions who are anxious for the formation of a new ministry.

The ratifying vote of the Reichstag was 300 to 174 in favor of the pacts.

The Reichstag voted in favor of Germany's entrance into the league by a vote of 278 to 183. There were six not voting.

A final vote on both the Locarno pacts and the league was passed by 291 to 174 with three not voting.

"I am supremely confident that the jury will grant Mr. Rhinelander an annulment of the marriage," said Isaac N. Mills, Rhinelander's chief attorney.

Gen. Eltinge Takes Stand to Rebut Mitchell Charges

Kingston Soldier, Former General Staff Officer in Charge of War Plans.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Nov. 27.—The tables turned the war department today began beating back against the charges of inefficiency and "almost treasonable neglect of national security made by Colonel William M. Mitchell.

Soon after the colonel's court martial opened today, the department offered, through Mitchell's prosecutors, the so-called secret tactical plan for defense of Hawaii, the movement being designed to controvert Mitchell's charge that Hawaii was undefended and neglected by the general staff.

Hawaiian Plan Produced.

The first witness, called technically in rebuttal to Mitchell's defense testimony, was Brig. General Leroy Eltinge, former general staff officer in charge of war plans. While he was on the stand the Hawiian plan was offered in evidence.

This secret document was attacked by Mitchell's counsel after court recessed to permit examination of the plan.

"This is not a defense plan," announced Representative Reid, Republican of Illinois, of defense counsel. "It is only a plan for defense of the Oahu Island. There are no provisions here for defending the five other large islands that are in the Hawaiian group. It doesn't mean anything."

Plan Secret, Not Made Public.

"It is the war department's secret plan for defending Hawaii," was the prosecution's only reply.

The document was examined by the court but not made public. Eltinge's preliminary testimony dealt with technical military subjects. He explained the difference between a war plane and a tactical plane. Reid constantly objected, demanding introduction of documents to support every statement made by the witness.

This provoked Colonel Sherman Moreland, trial judge advocate, who finally shouted "We can't even bring a blacksmith in here to tell how he shoes a horse without bringing in the horse."

Counsel Clash Early.

The session opened with a clash between Moreland and Reid. Reid charged the presentation of rebuttal evidence by the prosecution meant the "army general staff has gone on trial."

"If this evidence is offered in mitigation or extenuation of the acts of the army general staff, I shall not oppose its introduction," said Reid. "I mean if it is offered in mitigation against the charges proved here that the general staff has failed to develop aviation and has permitted a breakdown in the national defense, we will not oppose it."

Evidence to Prove "Aggravation."

This aroused Moreland, who declared the general staff was not on trial and the evidence was offered to prove the "aggravation" of Mitchell's offense.

"You've turned this case topsy turvy," Reid retorted. "We used to be the defense and now you've made us the prosecution and the general staff in the defense."

The row was settled when Colonel Blanton Winship, law member of the court, ruled the evidence could be offered in rebuttal of Mitchell's defense.

Not a Defense Plan.

It developed in the questioning of Eltinge that the defense plan introduced in evidence was "not a defense plan but a war project for the defense of Hawaii."

Major Francis Wilby, general staff officer, conducting the examination of Eltinge, next attacked Mitchell's charge that aviation was conducted by non-flying officers. Wilby's effort was blocked by Reid with objections to every question asked. Finally Eltinge was allowed to say the joint army and navy board, in acting upon aviation policies, always was advised by the aeronautical board, composed of flying men.

Personalities Interjected.

Personalities were frequently injected in the case. Winship attacked the prosecutor's method of presenting their case and admonished both Wilby and Moreland "not to waste time and [illegible]"

Harding Lecture Thrilled Hearers

"Smiling Jack" Harding Gave Graphic Description of Around-the-World Flight—Entertained at Dinner by Local American Legion Members.

Fairly surcharged with enthusiasm for the big adventure, Lieut. Jack Harding, one of the six successful world fliers, kept his big audience at the High School Auditorium Wednesday evening keyed up to a corresponding degree of enthusiasm although his most interesting account—illustrated with movies and still pictures—of the first man-flight around the world. The way in which Lieut. Harding came back and told all about it to the United States folks, was delightfully refreshing.

The American Legion, of which Lieut. Harding is an honored member, met him on his arrival in Kingston and tendered him a dinner at McCabe's Restaurant, following which all present adjourned to the High School Auditorium [illegible] Charles Keefe, chairman of the [illegible] committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs who brought the speaker to the city, had asked George W. Potter, head of the local legion, to introduce the speaker. Mr. Potter's introduction was as refreshing as the lecture. He recalled how a little over a year ago every American was interested in the outcome of the world flight being undertaken by six Americans and three planes. Would they succeed in circling the globe? Finally they did so succeed last September and the glory of the first world flight was America's. Mr. Potter considered that there were three important factors in the success of the flight: Preparedness, planes, and personnel, with emphasis on the personnel of such men as Lieut. Smiling Jack Harding who coupled proved flying skill with undaunted courage and cheerfulness.

Lieut. Harding was given a rousing welcome. Smilingly, he asked his audience to try and quite forget that they were in an auditorium and instead to jump into the plane with him, tighten their belts, sit tight and by all means refrain from jumping out, while they went with him on the long flight of 27,000 miles. All that had been read in newspaper and magazine about the flight seemed suddenly to come to life as the speaker told of the experiences his companions and himself endured, or showed where and how they flew, sometimes with a movie on the screen, again stopping at some vantage point of world fame in a "still." Nor did the trip exhaust Lieut. Harding's fund of humor, which added much to the entertaining feature of the lecture.

The lecturer spoke earnestly of the sincere friendly feeling of the Japanese people for America and Americans, even in the face of the exclusion act which was passed just before the planes reached the Japanese Empire.

While in the Orient, Lieut. Harding was greatly impressed with the apparently unlimited man-power of those Eastern lands. There can be but little mechanical progress where man-power is so multitudinous and so cheap.

He told graphically of the accidents to other planes than this, thus reducing the successful planes to two, and his statement that there was one man, Mitchell, who was trying to awaken America to its need of air power that will be adequate and safe, called forth a burst of applause.

Nothing short of hair-raising were his accounts of certain dangers encountered, especially when flying over deserted country fifty-five miles from anything as human as a railroad, their engine almost went to pieces as they were in the air, but miraculously kept on going until they made a safe landing.

The most difficult undertaking of all was the crossing of the North Atlantic from Iceland to Greenland, some 825 miles. Reading about it in the press was absolutely colorless compared to Lieutenant Harding's account, particularly of the 600 miles that his plane had to fly absolutely alone, having lost their companion.

Another interesting angle of the lecture was the speaker's enthusiasm over the—to him—unexpected and almost not understood enthusiasm of the masses of people who welcomed the fliers on their return to America, all along the route. And he closed his long-to-be-remembered lecture with a happy description of their return to California where they ran their planes up onto a bed of roses composed of some twenty-five truck loads of flowers, where each flier received a little bag of gold in token of having reached the end of the rainbow. According to orders the planes came into the end of the circle, nose and nose, so that none could say that he was the first to fly completely around the world, where all had shown such skill, such fortitude, such cheerful endurance and loyalty.

PRACTICAL ROAD WORK

Marion county Oregon for the last few years has been quietly carrying on a road paving program which has resulted in hard-surface highways in every section of the county In fact all the principal county roads will be paved in the not distant future

A practical plan has been followed For years gravel or crushed rock had been hauled on the roads and packed down until it is from six inches to a foot deep Instead of disturbing this well packed base, Marion county has had it covered with four inches of asphaltic concrete which protects it from the water and absorbs the impact of traffic Some of this pavement is now ten years old has required little or no maintenance expense and is in as good condition as when first laid

This type of road construction gives full value for every dollar expended in hauling rock onto a road, and secures a high grade type of pavement at from one-half to one-third the cost often involved in road paving programs which overlook the salvage value of old highways and needlessly destroy good foundations already built

NEWSPAPERS

On the subject of the difference between American and English newspapers Editor Strachey of the London Spectator, now in this country, when recently asked for his view merely said that the English papers have less news and more comment and the American papers less comment and more news Some other British observers have noted more difference than this and lamented a tendency shown by several London papers to adopt American methods of presenting the news The British ambassador at Washington Sir Esme Howard recently expressed the opinion that American papers are the more "partisan not indicating whether he referred to editorial comment or to 'editing' the news If he meant the former, it would appear that he does not agree with Mr Strachey that American papers are rather short on comment

In this connection the New York Times makes the following statement which may be found enlightening by many American readers as well as by Englishmen "For years the American press has been gaining in the very virtue which he (Ambassador Howard) said it lacks and now possesses it to a notable degree Once all our papers were intensely partisan, and most of them colored their news to accord with their political opinions Now that is done hardly at all in the more important papers and the minor ones do it much less than they used to."

ENGLAND'S WORTHY PRIDE.

It is interesting, though not surprising to find that Englishmen are not displeased but, on the contrary, rather proud that their country was granted less easy terms than Italy in the settlement of the war debts to the United States The British government, after agreeing to pay the principal and ordinary interest, like any responsible and substantial debtor, voluntarily announced through Chancellor Churchill, before the French negotiations failed, that England would offer no objections if France were granted easier terms. And now John St Loe Strachey, editor of the London Spectator, has felt moved to express himself as follows to a New York audience:

We thank you for not having tempted us to default and to break our plighted faith. If you had tossed us two billions or three billions as charity I hope, may I am sure, that the nation would have refused to pick it up, whatever timid politicians might have said of our folly. We were too proud to default.

The straitened French may object that Italy was granted better terms than were offered them but not the English—heavily burdened though they are Napoleon did not call them a nation of shopkeepers for nothing They have lived on trade and know that its firm basis is straight dealing including the recognition that debts must be honorably discharged Americ[illegible] ca is the better both for its heavy percentage of English blood and its inheritance of worthy pride of this sort

A Springfield, Ill., voter discovered on election day that when his amputated leg was buried last February the burial permit issued caused the removal of his name from the voting list Expressing wonder at such carelessness, the Philadelphia Evening Ledger remarks that 'here Ill would have voted the leg'

That Body of Yours

DANGER IN DELAY

One of our Southern physicians states, that at least ten thousand lives would be saved yearly in North America, if the pain from appendicitis were recognized early enough by the sufferer He points out that in more than two thirds of the cases the pain is typical of appendicitis The pain begins right above or at the umbilicus or navel region and gradually spreads over the entire abdomen in two or three hours Then in about six to twelve hours from the onset the pain settles in some definite portion of the abdomen usually at what is called McBarney's point on the right side which is three or four inches to the right and below the navel or umbilicus

Now all pain in this region is not appendicitis A little extra gas formation will give pain in this region as there is really a double S curve just beyond the junction of the small with the large intestine However the main point when you get a pain in that region is not to ignore it but to notice whether or not it remains in the one spot

Your physician will tell you that genuine cases of appendicitis that are recognized the first day and the appendix removed scarcely ever result seriously The deaths from such cases would not be one in a hundred

Where the pain and inflammation persist for two or three days there is naturally more serious results and where the operation is postponed a few days more, the danger is of course greater

Now the point to remember is that most of these abdominal pains are due to gas, soon pass away, and no alarm should be felt with gas pains anywhere in the abdomen

But when a pain locates in the one spot and remains there for some time, then your safest plan is to see your family doctor at once He will not hand you over to the surgeon nor operate himself if it isn't necessary

But it is most important that you do not neglect this steady pain in the lower part of the right side of the abdomen

SOLDIERS AFLOAT

One hundred and fifty years ago today the marine committee of the Continental Congress was writing its final draft of the first 'Rules for the Regulation of the Navy of the United Colonies' to be laid before the congress on the morrow Here for the first time the pitifully little organization which was to represent the colonies on the high seas was dignified by the title of The Navy

As a matter of fact there was really no navy at all when these rules and regulations were set forth It was yet to be created But the decision had been made that there was to be a navy and that was the important thing and the search was under way for suitable merchant ships to be refitted for the purpose in hand This purpose bear in mind was not pitched battles with the mighty warships of the great British navy but the raiding of enemy supply ships for the double purpose of annoying the enemy and of securing supplies badly needed by the patriot army particularly military supplies

In its beginning this little navy was but a child of the army In fact Esek Hopkins its commander was the commander in chief of the army—the General was Washington was commonly called in the official camp orders For its officer this new navy had to draw upon army officers of recent appointment to whom "a life on the ocean wave a home on the rolling deep" was something absolutely new and upon mariners who knew all the craft of the merchantman but none of the science of the fighting sailor

Quite naturally these soldiers afloat are for a time somewhat uncertain sailors Of their achievements in spite of their handicaps there will be frequent reports in this series of stories Today's tribute belongs rather to the far seeing forefathers of the republic who laid down these first rules and regulations for nations pay discipline courts martial, pensions, bounties and many other things.

Standing out conspicuously throughout the rules was one thing that has interested naval historians quite as much as the inevitable routine This was the thoughtful provision for the comfort and welfare of the men before the mast Directions for the care of the sick and wounded the safeguarding of property rights of enlisted men, and careful provision for an ample and healthful diet were worked out with the most painstaking detail an instance of which was the provision for "a proportion of canvas for pudding-bags, after the rate of one ell for every 16 men"

Holiday Ends in Death for Four

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 27.—A family of four—father, mother, a daughter and a son—were driven to death in a hired automobile in the dark depths of the East River. Only the chauffeur, Michael Gentile, survived the accident today.

The tragedy occurred late last night, shortly after the family had bidden a jovial good night to relatives at whose home in Brooklyn they had enjoyed a Thanksgiving dinner.

The dead:

Tony Bellanuno, 67; his wife Domonicka, 62; their daughter, Edith 20, and their son, Anthony 21 of White Plains.

Gentile, also from White Plains, had been engaged to take the party to Brooklyn. Returning home, he turned into Jay street, a thoroughfare he was unfamiliar with. It was a closed street. The car suddenly struck the low concrete bulkhead at the end of the thoroughfare, leaped into the air, turned over and crashed down into the dark, swift-flowing stream.

The terrified screams of the occupants attracted men working in a nearby refinery. They reached the submerged automobile and rescued Gentile, unconscious. The others were dead.

Gentile was later held on a technical charge of homicide pending police investigation of the four deaths.

Rejection Slip "Made" Great Southern Poet

Was Sidney Lanier "made" by a rejection slip from the Atlantic Monthly? So it would seem, to judge by the discoveries of Dr. Ernest Kuhl, who this year taught at the University of Maine summer school, says the Boston Herald.

A letter written by the great poet from his dismal garret to Edward Spencer, the poet and essayist has just been unearthed. In it he tells of the rejection of his poem "Corn," which has since become so widely known, by Editor William Dean Howells, in 1874, on the ground that it was inconsistently put together. The chagrin which followed this setback, he indicates, was the turning point of his career, the rebuff having inspired the determination to devote his life to poetry.

This find was made by Doctor Kuhl, professor of English at Goucher college, Baltimore. He has adopted the avocation of "literary miner," and spends much of his spare time seeking out documents which give new light on the careers of departed poets and writers. The negro section of Baltimore has proved a fruitful field, and strangely enough, he has unearthed many a first and second edition of unusual interest in garrets and storerooms of old houses. There has always been a connection in the popular mind between garrets and poets, and Doctor Kuhl's research shows that this is not a mere melodramatic conception.

In fact, the precious Lanier "find" was itself discovered in one of the various spaces reserved for "times of no practical use, but which are kept because of sentimental attraction. In it Lanier tells of his misfortunes and of the indescribable spiritual exaltation which comes through sorrow and hardship.

Doctor Kuhn has read his letters in the course of his lectures, and it is understood that he plans to publish them. He gave the Lanier address at the Johns Hopkins university recently and has also within the last year delivered lectures on Lanier at the University of North Carolina and other Southern colleges.

Plants Useful During War

Among the inventions in which plants were put during the World war were: Sphagnum moss, dressing for wounds; charcoal from fruit pits used for gas masks; bird and willow pulp, used as a substitute for cotton and the nettle for making textiles; meal obtained from dried bananas, cassava, corn, Indian corn, barley, beans, peas and buckwheat used in place of flour; roasted barley and nuts and roasted acorns and beech nuts, substitute for coffee; in Germany eventually a substitute for coffee was made from carrots and yellow turnips; bloom of the linden tree mixed with beech bulb was found to make an excellent beverage; roasted peas and oats, a substitute for cocoa.

You may come in our store and after pricing a certain rubber you may say you can get it cheaper in another store but we know you CAN'T. You'll probably get a cheaper grade and it's hard to tell the difference even if seen by an experienced buyer. We handle only grade AA. Our reason for only handling the best grade rubber is this. The best materials are used in making grade AA rubber, grade AA rubber footwear is made by the vacuum process on shaped aluminum lasts, grade AA rubber footwear is made blister proof by many degrees of heat which smooth out every natural rubber wrinkle—and the result, you may pay a few more cents for the best grade but then if the rubber cracks, you can bring it back and get a new pair free of charge.

British Honored Sons of Benedict Arnold

Very little has been written of Arnold outside of his traitorous conduct in connection with the attempted surrender of West Point to the British, says the Dearborn Independent. Through a correspondence with Major Andre, Arnold, then commanding West Point, offered to surrender to the British; and to consummate the plan Arnold and Andre met at midnight on the shore of the Hudson September 21, 1780. The capture of Andre frustrated the scheme, and Arnold fled to the British sloop of war Vulture.

The British made him brigadier general and he fought the American army at Richmond, Portsmouth and New London, Conn. In December, 1781, he sailed for England with his family, who were pensioned by the British government. He received about $31,755 for his alleged losses in deserting the Americans. Failing to get a position in the army he was forced to take up the trade of merchant. He carried on trade with the West Indies, but returned to London in 1791.

War between France and England exposed his shipping to great risks and Arnold on one occasion was captured by a French ship, but managed to escape. The British government still refused to give him active service in the army and he turned his attention to fitting out privateers against France to recover his lost fortune, but being unsuccessful, weighed down by private debts, and despised by America and the British empire, he sank into a state of acute melancholy, and died June 14, 1801, regretting, it is said, his treason.

His first wife gave birth to three sons. His eldest sons received commissions in the British army; and his second son by his second marriage, inheriting his father's daring and military ability, rose to be a lieutenant general, was made aid de camp to King William IV and was created a knight. Arnold's other children held honorable positions, and one of his grandsons, Capt. William Traill Arnold, a brave fighting man, was killed in the Crimean war.

Seek Lost Italian City

A lost city, sunk in the bay of Naples, 2,500 feet below the surface of the water, is the treasure that will be sought by Hans Hartman, an American deep-sea diver, according to the Rome newspaper, Risorgimento. Diving apparatus, constructed according to Hartman's designs by the Krupp works at Essen, is said to be capable of resisting the enormous pressure of the water at a depth of 12,000 feet. A special oxygen generating device will permit two occupants of the machine to live for 36 hours, and a special motor-driven propeller will send it to the surface in case the cable breaks. No human diver has previously explored more than 300 feet beneath the surface, according to Hartman, who believes that in future centuries men will derive much of their fuel and even their food from submarine sources.

"Log Cuffing"

The "log-cuffing" contest is an annual event which takes place among the lumberjacks of the Northwest and the last one took place at Washburn, Wis., when the champion of 1924 went down.

Seven men contested and five of them were Indians. The men endeavored to see which could balance himself for the longest time on a log floating freely in a body of water. It narrowed down to a contest between Joe Mad-Way-Osh, the former champion, and Anton De Fore, and the former fell from his perch after 22 minutes. This contest has nothing in common with another which is practiced in the same country where two men perched upon the opposite ends of the same log endeavor to upset the other.

ALLIE BAA'S COMFORT

She Couldn't Draw.

Allie Baa's mother was very sad. Her mother's name was Mrs. Cucumber Green.

Of course that was not her real name. But it was her play name.

She always called herself that when she played "house" and, in fact, a great deal of the time, she called herself Mrs. Cucumber Green. Her family called her that quite, quite often, too.

Mrs. Cucumber had just begun going to school and she enjoyed the new experience very much

She was always happy though when Saturday came and she had a whole long day with Allie. Still Allie was her favorite child.

Allie's real name was Alice Gustava Ariel Star Jewel Bright Carol Carmen Cucumber Green.

That was too long a name to use very often, so Mrs. Cucumber Green always called her Allie Baa.

Allie Baa was a rag doll, as without a doubt, you know.

She was the dearest, sweetest rag doll that ever lived She was neither too big nor too small. She was so perfect to hug.

Oh, and she nestled down by her mother at night when bedtime came with such a sweet, loving, restful, happy manner.

Her little rag body even seemed to say that it, too, felt happy to be close to that of her mother's.

Allie Baa's rag face was painted, but much of the paint had worn off through so much kissing.

If you had asked Allie Baa how many times she had been kissed in her life she never could have told you.

She had been kissed such countless times.

Now Mrs. Cucumber Green had been working for a prize. The one who got the best marks all told during that month in school was going to win a beautiful book as a prize.

The children had seen the book. It had been up on a shelf in the school room.

Oh, how Mrs. Cucumber Green did want that book. How she did want to earn it, to win it, to have it as hers, to get the prize!

She worked so hard all the month, and her lessons were always thoroughly studied.

Allie was patient about it, too.

She could not play so much when her mother was studying so hard, but she sat by her mother and kept quite quiet, for she knew enough not to interrupt when her mother was studying.

And then, alas, oh, alas, Mrs. Cucumber Green did not win the prize.

Oh, she was so unhappy.

She had made such poor marks in her spelling for it was so hard for her to spell.

In fact she could spell any one word in a number of different ways, and even after she had studied her spelling hard and had written down the words the next day in school when the teacher had given them to the class, she would think they were all wrong.

And she would change her words to make them look right.

That was the way so many of them turned out wrong.

She always made such poor marks in drawing. She couldn't draw anything to make it look in the least bit like the thing she was supposed to be doing.

What a Comfort Was Allie Baa.

And, of course, that isn't making a very good picture!

The teacher praised Mrs. Cucumber Green for her good work and said another time she would, without a doubt, win the prize, for even with her poor marks, her good ones were so good that she had almost won.

With just a little more spelling study she would win next time—so the teacher had said. But oh, it was such a disappointment, such a sad, sad disappointment. Mrs. Cucumber Green didn't cry. She hardly ever cried, but she took Allie in her arms that night, and Allie was very quiet. But she was comforting her mother as no one else could comfort her. Oh, what a comfort was Allie Baa.

Papa Had Been Cheated

A widower who had a five-year-old son married a second time and his choice was a rather plain woman of about fifty. After the wedding they came home and the father introduced her to the little fellow, saying: "Arthur, this is the new mamma I promised to bring you." After taking a long and steady look at her, Arthur went over to his father and exclaimed in an audible whisper: "Papa, you've [illegible] isn't pes at all."

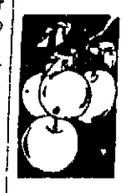
TEMPTING FOODS

When time is not pressing and you want to make a dish especially dainty try:



Apples de Luxe.—Wash and core four tart apples of uniform size and good flavor. The variety which will bake well and not lose its shape should be chosen. Put into a baking dish and cover with cold water. Bake slowly. Fill the centers with three-fourths of a cupful of chopped raisins and nuts. When the apples are cooked and cool cover with a powdered-sugar frosting flavored with almonds. When firm and cold pour over melted chocolate and we have apples Allegretti.

Pistachio Roll.—Bake a layer of sponge cake as for jelly roll spreading it thinner than for a jelly cake. While warm spread with marshmallow filling tinted green. Wrap, turn the edges and wrap in paper and tie. When serving lay on a platter, cover with whipped cream. Decorate the cream by dipping a fork into the green coloring and streak the cream. Serve with raspberry sauce.

Tomato Jelly With Tuna Fish.—Prepare a tomato jelly, using one and one-half cupfuls of strained tomato juice, a slice of onion, salt and pepper. Bring to the boiling point, remove the onion, add a tablespoonful of gelatin which has been soaked in cold water. Turn into small molds and set away to chill. When firm, dip a spoonful out of the center of each and fill with tuna fish seasoned with mayonnaise dressing. Garnish the top of each with a spoonful of dressing.

Pumpkin Pie de Luxe.—Take one cupful of well-cooked and sifted pumpkin, add two cupfuls of rich milk, two eggs, one-third of a cupful of sugar (more sugar may be needed if the pumpkin is not sweet), a little salt, ginger, and a few drops of lemon extract. Bake in a slow oven in a rich pastry shell. When ready to serve top with whipped cream and sprinkle with grated cheese.

Salvation Army Special Services

Adjutant Samuel Hewitt the Salvation Army's great evangelist will visit Kingston and conduct two weeks special services at the local post on North Front street. Adjutant Hewitt has held special series of meetings in every part of New York state and is rated as a powerful, convincing speaker.

During the stay of Captain Miller in Tarrytown the adjutant conducted a series of meetings that were highly successful. The churches of the town cooperated and were enthusiastic in their commendation of the type of service conducted by the evangelist. The preacher comes to Kingston from Plainfield, N. J., where he has just completed a remarkable series of services.

The Tuesday night service will be held in the chapel in Sleightsburgh.

THE CROSS-EYED NEWCAT.

The bad habit of continually washing its front paws at close range causes the eyes of the young mew-kitten to be crossed very badly. As a result it becomes a very timid creature, never getting into a fight because it always sees two cats in front of it when there is only one. This faculty of seeing double is an advantage, as it only eats half as much catnip as it thinks it sees, so a newcat is certainly an economical house pet.

Instead of a toothpick for a tail, the newcat would prefer a real cattail if it were not so large to carry around. Its head is a fibert, and the body a single peanut. Popcorn ears, split navy bean feet, and clove legs make up the rest of the beast, and the eyes are done with white and black paint.

BAVARIAN GOTTERDAMMERUNG.

This loud, and noisy creature is found in the woods around Bayreuth, forever roaring away at the bass notes in the Siegfried Funeral March, and causing a great quantity of insomia among the inhabitants of that village. It feeds on ostrich drumsticks and drinks nothing but 40 h. p. schnapps; a diet that develops its resonant tonsils. It gets its name from the terms the natives use when speaking of it.

A well developed walnut furnishes him with his lung container, and a fat filbert does for the head. Split navy bean ears, a popcorn nose, and cornsilk whiskers answer for the rest of him, along with spaghetti legs and lima bean feet.

A "Snowtime Story" about rubbers for children and mothers

MOTHERS and fathers know how hard the little folks are on rubbers. They scuff 'em at the toes and they pound 'em at the heels.

But they'll have a hard time wearing out Top Notch rubbers. The makers of Top Notch rubbers have invented and patented the Clincher Cushion Heel which so strongly re-inforces the heel that it will wear as long as the sole. Toe caps and all other vital points of wear also have extra strength. Top Notch rubber footwear often gives twice the wear of ordinary rubbers.

Rubbers and arctics for children, youths, women, misses, men—you'll find a complete line at "Station T N S"—the Top Notch Store. Neat-fitting and stylish in appearance as well as unusually serviceable and long-wearing. Our reputation stands back of every pair.

Silhouettes That Are in Limelight

Flare and Waistline Chief Features Offered by Paris Makers.

The passion for slenderness will not down, and every one of the accepted silhouettes of the season pays homage to the willowy line, observes a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune. There were many predictions last summer to the effect that pulchritude was about to return to the haunts of the mode, that the marked waistline and the full and flaring silhouettes were paving the way for the revival of a sort of modified Amazon, statuesque to the point of being plump.

When the Paris couture first blared its fall message to a palpitant world, these prophecies seemed in a fair way of being realized. The predomina of the flare and molded bodice, princess silhouette du soir, the defin and higher waistline all seemed in clined to lift the ban against the lon, harassed embonpoint and the outlook was dark indeed for the daily dozen.

The chic Parisienne, however, was otherwise inclined. She accepted the flare, she gave a hearty welcome to the princess silhouette and the waistline, but in every instance with the reservation that her hard-earned slenderness was to remain the basis of the new styles. And her verdict has been eagerly echoed by smart society on these distant shores. Eat, drink and be merry is deferred to a later day.

Yet if the general effect of the outline has remained slender, the silhouette has otherwise undergone some vital changes, significant enough to inspire prophecies of a new fashion cycle. The mobile silhouette, which has also been called kinetic, swinging and floating has generally succeeded the immobile, by contrast, straightline. This new outline, which becomes a lissome, graceful fantasy when its wearer is in motion, has got to incorporate some species of flare in its makeup. It can be at the front, the sides or the back, it can concentrate below the knees or it may be inaugurated at the waistline and even as high as the shoulders, but somewhere it must be the moving order of autumn, 1925.

Flare Runs Clockwise.

It is interesting to note the various manners in which the leading Paris designers arrive at the new outline. Captain Molyneux, for instance, using either the flare or circular cut on his robes du soir, concentrates fullness below the knees.

Jean Patou, on the other hand, inaugurates the distended effect above the knees. Lucien Lelong, apostle of the kinetic silhouette, employs a tucked flounce which has its origin above the knees and which flares widely and suddenly. The molded bodice is Paul Poiret's contribution, and its exceptionally high waistline overshadows the moderate skirt flare. And there is the cape-back flaring from shoulder or hips—from the former in this instance—characteristically exemplified in Chanel model of black mousseline de soie. Even the old order is represented in the straight-line street dresses of Patou and Molyneux. If you will add to these themes the back flare, the bolero effect, the bustle drape, the jacket ensemble and the princess outline, you will have a fairly complete catalogue of the broadening methods of the new silhouettes.

Which of these various flares you select for your own is not of great consequence. It is important to remember, though, that the flare increases in width and significance as the day grows older. The informal morning frock may be quite straight, the street dress should preferably flare in a moderate manner, formal afternoon clothes must always broaden distinctly and without compromise while the evening mode should climax its new elaboration by the widest of possible flares. The flare, in a word, runs clockwise.

Welcome Waistline.

There was a lot of early-season skepticism concerning the clearly marked waistline, and even now that prodigal stranger is a little uncertain of his welcome. But any one who has seen the attractive models which stress the waistline will doubt no more. In our own opinion it is the most esthetic theme in the new fall and winter mode. On the young it creates an impression of enervating youth, doubly welcome after these banal years of sophisticated tubularity, while for the matron it substitutes a graceful natural line for the imposed pencil silhouette. The waistline has threatened to return so often that it sounds like another cry of wolf to predict it again. This time, however, the wolf is really at the door—the distinctly defined waistline has its place in every chic wardrobe of autumn and winter, and its return means that the flat-chested woman is no more as far as the Paris mode is concerned. Apart from the simple two-piece jumper suit, which still permits the straight line, the figure is clearly defined in all of the latest models. This is one of the logical developments of the higher waistline. As the waistline creeps up it arrives at a point where the natural body curves in, and so the corsage above it must mold the figure in order to look in keeping.

Several of the most famous houses are using the waistline that is fairly low on the hips at the back and slopes up in front to finish in the center with a jeweled motif or buckle. With this line the skirt below usually has a full flare at the front and sides. This silhouette is particularly approved by Lucien Lelong, who fits in with his conception of the kinetic or moving outline. The front and side flares are used with impartiality by this house and several others, while still others favor all-round godets or a group of plaits or other kind of fullness at the back to give the new back flare that forms the bird-like silhouette sponsored by Premet, Martial et Armand and some of the more conservative houses.

Explaining the Choker Neck.

The high neckline, offered originally with some show of virtue by the Paris couture, is one of the interesting phenomena of the current season. It is not the sole smart neckline of the autumn models, as the bateau and V lines have also made frequent appearances, but in popularity it easily leads all the rest.

The principal reason for the high neckline, according to its sponsors and wearers, is to preserve the symphony of the silhouette. What with short skirts and the hemline flare, a low neck would create a silhouette grotesquely short and totally unfitted for any but the most willowy types. They point it out, too, as a symptom of the rising tide of fashion—high hemline, higher waistline and the choker neck. Both are logical enough reasons.

We have a suspicion, however, that milady's attraction for the new neckline has a more psychological basis. Here is a mode which is a long, indiscreet step ahead of its pre-war predecessors. And a notable percentage of the ladies who exploit it were once steeped in the inhibitions of a decade and more ago. Along comes the high neckline, which would have been modest even in those prim days—and what more natural than that milady should succumb to the habit and training of her earlier days. "Call me immodest," she tells the ghost of her Victorian self—"look at this choker neck and forever hold your peace." It's the philosophy of the ostrich who buries his head in the sand and thinks thereby that he is entirely hidden, but it is thoroughly sufficient unto this day.

Shaded Velvet for Gown

Some of the new evening gowns are made of shaded velvet. The gowns are exceedingly simple and depend for their chic upon their color combinations.

gether in a hurry. Intricate inserts, and vores, panel effects, and well turned seams are necessary just now, and while one is constantly being told of patched gowns, the patching is a decorative note and often means that fur is used, or velvet. Cubist angles are repeated in gowns not only of cloth but for dress wear, and futuristic effects are far more to the liking of the modern than floral decorations which may be described as charming or sweet. The days of saccharine clothes are not those of today, the exception of course being in the ageless lingerie dresses which in certain environments are affected. Even though considerable lace is used, it is painstakingly put together so that it gives an almost tailored impression.

The combination of material and color idea which was one of the startling innovations of the season, seems to have taken hold. Frequently the color scheme is ultra, as for instance a vivid purple satin evening gown bordered with agnèau and embroidered on this apricot band with jade and cerise.

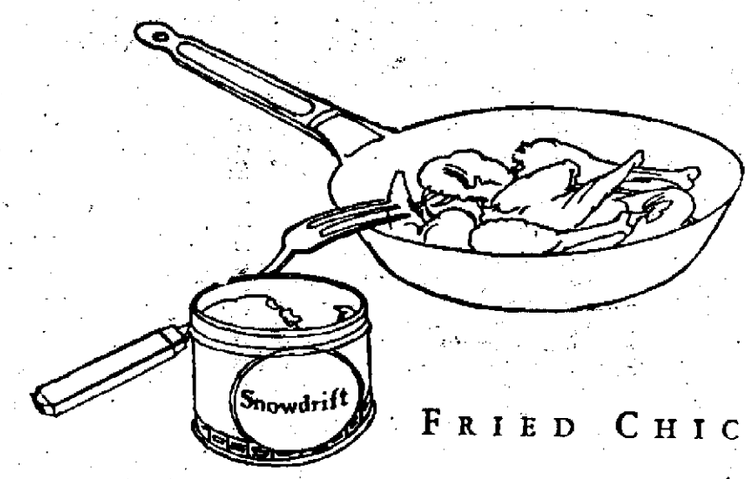
High Collars Contribute to Our Well Tailored Men—The Modern Prefers Spice to Sweetness in Dress.

The high collars may no longer be denied. Disapprove as one may of the choker it is here and would one be chic, one must have a scarf, a turtle neckline, a choker or something which will bandage the throat. Skirts, which according to some standards, are shockingly short are joined, or at least accompany waists which are decorous to a degree.

Women may show their knees, and even are uncovering their ears, but the chances are that one bundles to the chin, or near it, and refuses to go sleeveless. All of which makes for interest and as yokes, collars and long sleeves are a difficult matter to achieve unless one is an expert, it argues that our clothes must be well made and well fitted, certainly the newest models are quite free from any suspicion of being slapped to-



FRIED CHICKEN

Fry a chicken in Snowdrift and learn for yourself what a really good frying fat Snowdrift is.

Very young and tender chicken should be selected for frying. Singe, and remove the pinfeathers, clean and disjoint, as for fricassee. Dust each piece with salt and pepper, roll in flour, and brown in a frying pan in sufficient Snowdrift to prevent sticking. The chicken should be turned only once, the frying being accomplished slowly in about twenty minutes. Then place the chicken in a pan, dot it with a little extra Snowdrift, steam it for an hour and serve with a gravy made of the drippings in the frying pan. It will probably be necessary to add an extra tablespoonful of flour, a little more salt and pepper, and instead of water, as usual, pour in a cupful of very rich milk or light cream.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

BATTLEGROUND OF FIRE AND WATER

One Place Where Clangorous Boiler Factory Would Not Be Unwelcome.

Washington.—There is at least one place in the world where a large and clangorous boiler factory would not be unwelcome. On the Greek island called, in recent news dispatches, Santorini, but now officially designated Thira, a visiting observer reports the natives have become so accustomed to being rocked to sleep by the heavy rumblings and rifle crackings of a newly active volcano they fear they will suffer from insomnia when it quiets down again. The volcano started its eruption August 1 and will continue, it has been predicted, until next August.

"Thira has been for thousands of years a theater of volcanic activity," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society. "The waters of its great bay have boiled and flamed for days, and islands of red-hot matter have risen and disappeared as if controlled by stage machinery.

Shaped Like Crescent.

"At one time Thira was the top of a huge active volcano. It probably owes its present peculiar crescent shape to a tremendous eruption some thirty-five centuries ago when great gaps were blown in its sides. Another theory is that the mountain mass on which the volcano rested has sunk, leaving only the highest portions of the crater's rim above the surface of the water.

"Volcanic activity in this part of the Aegean is practically a continuous performance, although nothing short of a catastrophe seems to be recorded as an 'eruption.' B. C. 197 is given by some authorities as the date of the first great recorded eruption. There have since been several major outbreaks, causing the appearance and disappearance of certain small islands (not the present ones, however) in the center of the crater.

"The number '7' figures largely in the dates chosen by the volcano to be active. Records show eruptions during B. C. 197 and A. D. 726, 1570, 1573, 1707, 1711, 1867 and 1870. During the latter eruption an island arose in the center of the basin to a height of 240 feet. The island was named George crater, for King George of Greece.

"Today the remainder of the once great rim can be traced only by the islands which help to inclose the water-filled crater. In the center of this basin lie the Kaymani islands, representing the peaks of new volcanic upheavals within historic times. According to reports a new island has been added to this group by the current disturbances.

"The islands, which are on the direct steamer route between Athens and Egypt, are not prepossessing from a distance. Owing to the lack of water, there are no trees. The inner walls of the crater descend to the central basin in sheer cliffs from 600 to 1,000 feet in height. The external slope, however, is more gradual, and the thick layer of pumice stone which covers it is favorable to the growth of the vine.

"In close proximity on this slope are the two principal sources of wealth. The mining and shipping of 'Santorini, earth,' a composition of pumice stone valuable as a hydraulic cement, and the production of wine furnish employment to most of the 15,000 inhabitants of these islands, whose combined area is only half that of the District of Columbia.

Capital on Hilltop.

"Phira, the capital, nestles on the spur of a hill at the edge of the inner basin. A zig-zag road winds up to it from its port, Skala, directly below, and its white houses and cupolas enliven the brown crater walls in the bright Mediterranean sunshine.

"Approaching Thira by steamer from the northwest the gentle vine-clad outer slopes formed by the crater suddenly open and disclose an enormous basin, seemingly inclosed on all sides, the deep brown rock walls of which are stratified, like marble cake, with deposits of lighter-colored pumice stone. Clinging to the crater rim are several small villages and numerous many-sailed windmills, similar to those on the Isle of Samos, near by.

"The ancient capital, Thira, seven hours away by horseback on the eastern shore, perches on a ridge or plateau dropping on three sides. It must have been easy to defend in the days when the island was in turn a Phoenician, a Spartan, an Egyptian, a Roman, a Frank and a Turkish colony. For like its sister islands in the Aegean, Thira has known many masters. The first settlers are believed to have been the Phoenicians, but the principal ruins uncovered date from Roman times.

"Excavations reveal a long central street or road, intersected by numerous irregular side streets. Several temples, baths, a large theater, shrines, markets and dwelling houses have been found. Underneath the stage of the Roman theater traces of a Hellenistic proscenium, on which the use of the orchestra shifted, have been found. There are also a number of substructures hewn from solid rock, to the Egyptian Gods Isis, Serapis and Anubis."

Dollar for Each Boner Brooklyn Pilot's Idea

Mental lethargy is going to be a costly pastime for the Robins next spring, Manager Wilbert Robinson has worked out a system which he hopes will make his athletes think. Starting with the first day of 1926 training at Clearwater, Fla., the Robins are going to be fined a nominal sum each time the pull a "boner."

If a pitcher fails to cover first base on a hit to the first baseman, if a player fails to back up a throw, if a base runner fails to advance to an extra base at the proper time, or if any of the thousand and one little things that make baseball science fail to be followed, the player committing the diamond crime will have to reach down in his pocket and produce the sum of $1.

"My idea is not to punish the players, but to make them remember every time they do something wrong, and there is no better way of making a ball player remember than by fining him," Uncle Robbie said in discussing his system. "Every day there is some boner pulled and that's one of the reasons why we're not higher in the race. Sometimes the mistake is so small that the average fan does not even notice it, but nevertheless it is a chance missed, and next season the Robins are going to take advantage of every opportunity or else they'll be broke by the end of the season."

British Golf Official Against Standard Ball

William Norman Boase, chairman of the championship committee of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of Great Britain while in New York, said that he did not view favorably the standardized golf balls sponsored by the United States Golf association. He expressed the belief that for the time being at least there should be no radical change in the matter of balls used in British championship tournaments.

Mr. Boase who is chairman of the Scotch Flax Spinners and Manufacturers' association and a director of the Alliance Trust company of Dundee, Scotland, is in this country on business, and also will visit the Canadian Northwest.

NITION TIMING VERY IMPORTANT

Must Be Fully Ignited at Instant Crank Pin Passes Center.

rrect ignition timing is very im- nt, says William H. Stewart, Jr., ident of the Stewart Automobile ol The charge of gas must be ignited at the instant the crank passes dead center. When this is the full expansive force of the sion is exerted on the piston and best results are obtained. When motor is turning over at the rate 000 revolutions a minute the crank passes through top center much than when the motor is turning at the rate of 500 revolutions per ute Since it takes a certain unt of time for the charge of gas become fully ignited it is necessary troduce the spark into the cylin- a little in advance in order to fully ite the charge by the time the crank passes dead center

Knowledge of First Aid by Autoists Is Needed

That every man or woman who drives an auto should understand simple first aid methods, is the firm conviction of Dr. Herman Bundesen, Chicago health commissioner.

"Every year throughout the country, thousands of people unnecessarily lose their lives through automobile accidents, because those who could be of aid at the time of accident, become panicky and lose their heads when there is a cut artery," says Doctor Bundesen. "If they understood the simplest rudiments of first aid, a handkerchief and a pencil or ordinary stick of wood could be used as a tourniquet, thus stopping hemorrhage until medical help arrived.

"The autoist, especially, is in need of first aid knowledge Whether in the city or en route, he should be provided with a compact first aid kit.

"The common injuries which occur through automobile accidents are cut arteries, fractures or broken bones, cuts and bruises Many minor injuries, which through neglect, prove fatal, occur in taking off spare tires. Every wound no matter how slight, should immediately be swabbed with iodine Splints, used in case of fracture, will keep the limb at rest and relieve the patient of much pain until placed in the hands of the physician"

Smallest Automobile in Famous Brooklands Race

Great crowds of bank holiday vacationists witnessed the meeting at the Brooklands autodrome, England. Among the most interesting of the contesting cars was the single-cylinder Jappic, shown above, the smallest car entered. It was second in the 75 m p hr short handicap

Importance of Magneto Very Often Overlooked

The new car owner often worries about the electrical system of his car and is inclined to believe it is involved and liable to make trouble. As the spark is the life of the engine, he doesn't want anything to go wrong with the mechanism that generates it. Few beginners realize how simple, yet how effective and free from trouble the magneto really is. There is only one wire to each spark plug and one to the switch. There are no "don ts" and only one "do"—oil it now and then. As the magneto current reverses automatically with every spark, there is no pitting of contact points. No current can be wasted when the engine is not running.

The magneto is dependable under all conditions of operation. Where the engine changes speed rapidly, as on hills, in traffic, or in quick getaways, the magneto takes care of all these changes without a constant "nursing" of the engine being necessary.

BALLOON TIRES WERE USED 25 YEARS AGO

What were probably the forerunners of the modern balloon s were used on this huge tricycle in 1898. The tricycle traveled nicely in dry weather, propelled by six men on bicycle seats, all pedaling for dear life on a chain gear with one man at the steering wheel. But in wet weather it slid all over the street as sprinkled chains were not made large enough to go around the wheels. The two larger wheels were 14 feet in diameter, and the small wheel in front was six feet in diameter. The large wheels took tires 20 inches in diameter

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance, your lucky day, lucky jewel

MONICA

MONICA is not nearly as popular a name as it deserves to be. Not only has it beauty of sound and significance, but a strikingly interesting history, as well. It comes to us almost direct from the Spanish, but is nevertheless regarded as an English name and is more popular in England than in its native country. Many a golden-haired blue-eyed English girl bears the name first used to designate a raven-tressed, red lipped, coquette of Spain.

Monica is thought to have its earliest origin with the Greek term "domo," meaning "to rule." Dominica is a direct offspring of this word and there have been Saints Dominica, Domingo and Dominico, without number. One holy man by that name, who is associated with the Inquisition, had namesakes in all the Romanist lands, and the feminine of this popular title came to be officially Domenica; for short Menica.

The mother of Saint Augustine was the first to be called Monica. Some etymologists even believe that her name should be classified as one coming directly from the Latin verb "moneo," meaning "to advise," but the consensus of opinion is that Monica was evolved in the manner aforementioned. Monica is also a favorite in France and the peasantry call it Monique. Moncha is the Irish form.

The emerald is Monica's talismanic gem. It is believed to bestow upon her the gift of foretelling or sensing future events. She will have especially keen perception when she wears the jewel and will be guarded against deceit. Wednesday is her lucky day and 1 her lucky number.

Modern Wanderlust

There is little cause for alarm over the increasing number of schooling hobos, said the principal of a suburban high school recently. Present-day ease of transportation has made it possible for the modern boy to wander further in the same length of time. The boy of twenty years ago was content to go camping in the back lot because it was impossible for him to travel further. But boys nowadays have shared in the mature contempt for distance and frequently travel a hundred miles, begging rides on the highways, just to go fishing or camping out for a few days.—Detroit News.

Common Thing Now to Advertise for Mates

It is customary in France and Germany—and particularly Germany—to advertise for a husband or a wife, as the case may be. Judging from the newspapers, indeed, it would seem as though the respective countries were full of well-endowed men and women who, for some reason, have failed to find the right person with whom to share their lives.

It is rather new to see the same procedure in England in the guise of well-advertised newspapers devoted almost entirely to the promotion of marriage. In England the romantic view of marriage has held, at least in theory, and King Cophetua and the beggar maid have everywhere received approval, tacit or other.

There is the greater difficulty of marrying today owing to the discrepancies in the number of men and of women. It is probably a feeling that many women are practically unable to marry today which has caused greater concentration on the subject of marriage to the extent of making it almost a public matter.

Quite apart from the natural desire to marry, the life of the single Englishwoman is often intolerably lonely. She has her work, but she has little besides. And work for work's sake is a dull business. A single man, besides being better paid, has community interests, which are as a rule not shared by women. He has his club, his games, even his favorite bar.

He has strength left over at the end of the day to be vigorous concerning politics or some other hobby. The woman has a narrower sphere, and she has not as a rule the necessary money with which to enlarge it. Matrimony provides some refuge from loneliness—a loneliness from which in the rather sad world of today, the average woman is thankful to escape.—Manchester Guardian.

New Religions in Russia

In Kobryn, Poland, and in neighboring localities a new religious movement is developing among the Jews. They are said to be breaking away from the orthodox Jewish church and are being baptised as Protestants. Long curls are being cut off and black robes are being exchanged for European dress. Last month 342 Jews, in Kobryn, were baptized as Protestants. Some observers speak of it as a mass desertion from the Jewish faith. Another movement is in the form of a new religion, which resembles communism, but is more like a free-thinking sect. Many members of this sect receive liberal funds from America. Both ideas seem to have come from over the Russian frontier. In both Russia and eastern Poland Baptists are making converts, mostly among Ukrainians and White Russians. In Yugo-Slavia a new and strange sect was discovered recently. It was headed by a German, Otto Webb. Gendarmes arrested Webb and his eight converts. He was teaching resistance to compulsory military service, and refusal to use arms. Pacifism the Serbs look upon with deep suspicion.

A Lesson

Governor Ritchie of Maryland said in a talk to high school graduates:

"Ibsen was sixty when he began to write the tense prose dramas that won him world fame.

"Bernard Shaw had to compose over a dozen excellent plays before the big managers would look at him.

"Wagner was a middle-aged failure, was about to commit suicide when the king of Bavaria agreed to finance his operas.

"These facts show us that failure is due to a lack of perseverance oftener than to a lack of ability. The road to success, in fact—"

And Governor Ritchie emphasized his words with a trenchant gesture.

"The road to success," he repeated, "is all choked up with men who, getting discouraged, have turned back."

Some amusing statistics have been issued by two Chicago investigators, who found that after two years girls cry more frequently than boys and that almost invariably the female infant learns to talk before the male.

KEEP UP SEARCH FOR PIRATE GOLD

Another Expedition After Buccaneers' Hoard.

The dispatch of a British expedition "equipped with the latest scientific appliances" to lift pirate treasure from the island of Cocos seems to indicate that the romantic life will never lose its peculiar appeal. Whether the buccaneers ever buried any treasure or not, and whether they were stupid enough to leave it buried if they did, are questions which history has never satisfactorily answered. It has nothing to do with the persistence of those golden, those glowing legends; the spirit of the unfortunate Kidd will doubtless never be laid along the New England coasts, and people will never be convinced that anything so fascinating as pirate gold could also turn out to be wholly fictitious

The scientific appliances, of course, may fail to turn up the expected £14,000,000, but the Britishers will at least secure the less filthy lucre of romantic adventure. The very name of Cocos island, like so many of those lovely and alluring names which still turn a chart of the West Indies into a literary experience, brings up the whole picture. Cocos, lying in a convenient isolation west of Panama, was one of the centers for the magnificent operations which followed upon Henry Morgan's demonstration that in the Pacific there were still richer ships to scuttle and cities to sack. John Masefield's account of the Seventeenth-century buccaneers devotes several chapters to the famous expedition which crossed the Isthmus of Darien, descended upon Panama, and then went on to harry the Pacific coasts of South America. It was the richest period in the buccaneering trade, the cargoes were fabulous, the daring was unbelievable, and the final proceeds sometimes almost seemed to be worth it.

One can almost see the island, sleeping in a blue sea behind a palm-fringed beach, heavy with memories of the great period. Perhaps it does not really look that way. Perhaps there is not really any gold there, and perhaps, at any rate, if one actually touched its shores the glory would fade and leave only the mosquitoes. Mr. Beebe may be an authority. But one feels that the scientific appliances are the least important part of the expedition's equipment.

Restored French Empire

The phrase, "coup-d'etat," is generally applied to the successful effort made by Louis Napoleon, December 2, 1851, to subvert the republic of France, and to establish a dictatorship in its stead. The conspiracy was planned by Napoleon, Persigny and De Morny, and carried out by C. de Maupas, minister of police, St. Arnaud and others. The legislative assembly was dissolved, universal suffrage established, and Paris was declared in a state of siege. The election of a president for a term of ten years was proposed, 80 members of the assembly were banished, and 575 persons were arrested for resistance to the coup d'etat and conveyed to Havre for transportation to Cayenne. The coup d'etat resulted in the restoration of the empire December 2, 1852.—Kansas City Star.

Make Home in Street Car

Two discarded cable cars are the home of the A. S. Brewers, in Seattle. The cable car dwelling is entered from its original side-front door, which opens into the living room, made of the combined front platforms, which are larger than those of a regular street car. Cable cars used on Seattle hills have three compartments each, front, middle and rear, with a door on either side, and windows lining both sides. In the Brewer home, the bedroom occupies the middle compartment and the bath the rear in one car, each with the original sliding doors. In the other car the dining room has the middle compartment and the kitchen the rear.

Something to Drown It In

The young fellow from Kentucky walked into a studio the other day for vocal lessons. The folks down home thought he had a voice and all that he needed was training. The teacher asked him to sing.

Without accompaniment he started in on "Yes, We Have No Bananas" And the bananas were higher than nature or a musician intended them to be. The teacher giggled in spite of herself. "I need a piano to lead my voice," the youth suggested.

"Yes, or a bass drum to drown it," the teacher added, but to herself.—Indianapolis News.

Luxurious Modern Travel

The Flying Scotsman, one of the de luxe trains running out of London, England, now has an electric galley in its dining car. In this traveling kitchen there are an electric range and several other electric cooking appliances. The electricity utilized in this unique gallery is provided by a generator that is connected to the wheels beneath the dining car. Also there are storage batteries which provide electricity when the dining car is standing still.

ST. MARY'S JUNIORS AND SENIORS PLAY TONIGHT.

Tonight, on St. Mary's court, the St. Mary's Junior Quintet will endeavor to take a fall out of the Senior Holy Name Five. A great deal of interest is being shown in this game, as the Junior Saints have won all three of their games this season, and the Seniors are out to stop them. Although the Juniors will be numerically outweighed by their older brothers, they are confident of keeping their record intact.

Both teams have been practicing hard for the game, and will be in the best of shape. As the championship of the parish hinges on this game, a large crowd is expected to turn out.

The Juniors will line up with: Long, Joyce, Gilday, Mooney, Cody, Noble and Cramer, while the Seniors will probably have Fitzgerald, Leon Conklin, Jordan, Murphy, Leonard and Dave in uniform.

Game will start at 8:15, with "Punk" Norman as referee.

Gen. Eltinge's Suggestion.

Eltinge, who acted as one of the chief umpires in the Hawaiian maneuvers, next declared that cooperation of the army and navy air services was not satisfactory in these maneuvers because they had not had any previous training in joint maneuvers.

"How would you correct that condition?"

"By difference in tactical organization of the line forces and by joint maneuvers and exercises in time of peace."

"What would have been the effects of cooperation if we had three separate coordinate services, army, navy and separate air service?"

"The army's duties are on the land," Eltinge replied, "and the navy on the water. They overlap at the shore line. An additional service, which overlapped both of them, would make cooperation absolutely impossible."

Prisoner Kidnaps Guard and Escapes

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Ossining, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Police and state troopers were today scouring New York state for James Trana, 21, who alone and unarmed, kidnapped a guard and escaped from Sing Sing penitentiary late last night. It was one of the most audacious get-aways in the history of the institution.

Trana, who is serving a sentence for burglary, spread the bars of his cell and had gotten as far as the warden's house which opens on the city street when he was seen by W. L. Murphy and Edward Kennedy, two prison guards coming off duty, unarmed.

Murphy said that in the dim light they mistook him for another guard.

Trana on coming into the glare of a lighted window of the house and being revealed as a convict yelled to Murphy, despite the fact that he was unarmed:

"Stay where you are or I'll blow your head off."

Trana ordered Kennedy to accompany him and arm in arm the pair walked across the lawn into Ossining.

Warden Lawes suspended both guards.

Kennedy, the other prison guard, sheepishly admitted Trana had forced him to give up his overcoat, according to Warden Lawes, who termed the escape "the most absurd thing I ever heard of."

"Both these guards were bluffed, the circumstances indicate," Lawes said. "This convict Trana had no weapon. He should have been shot as soon as he refused to halt."

Hope to Have 5,000 Bus Signers

With five wards to be heard from, petitions favoring the Winne seven cent bus line have been filed with City Clerk Styles. The petitions filed have 1,700 signers and it is hoped that when all of the petitions are in the number will be increased to about 5,000 signers.

These petitions will be taken to Albany at the same time that the Winne petition is filed with the public service commission.

DuBois of Lindsley avenue, has won one of the highest scholastic honors presented to under-graduate students, that of being initiated into the national honor fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa, which carries with it the privilege of wearing the golden key, says the Commercial Appeal of Memphis, of Sunday, November 22, and which also published a two column photograph of Miss DuBois.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 27.—The motor stocks resumed their position in the lead of the forward movement in the stock market today. While the general trend of prices was upward, the market was devoid of special features, price changes were narrow in comparison with some of the spectacular recent sessions, the volume of trading again fell off, and the rallies met with such a persistent volume of selling orders that stocks were not able to retain the prices for any considerable length of time.

Call money was in good supply. The rate was moved up to 5 per cent in the fourth hour.

The motor and specialty stocks showed a considerable improvement. Chrysler at 189½ was up 22 points. General Motors up 8; Hudson up 9; Cast Iron Pipe up 16; Dupont up 15.

A few of the "personally conducted" pool stocks moved up a point or more as the result of quite active and large volume trading. International Combustion Engineering topped 60 for a new gain of 3 points, and American Water Works was up nearly 3 points to above 64. Pools relinquished their activities in the bulk of oil and industrial stocks.

Most of the steel stocks were higher with United States Steel leading the procession. Sloss Sheffield made a new high for the year at 126 on rumors of an impending fifty per cent stock developed.

There were no developments of importance in the railroads and oil stocks. Atlantic Coast Line moved up about 4 points to 229½ and other high priced rails acquired some new gains.

Foundation Company foreign rights sold up 5 points to 39 in active trading.

Expect Pinchot To Take Action

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 27.—Governor Pinchot today would neither confirm nor deny the report that he has submitted a tentative draft of a proclamation for a special session of the legislature, expected to be issued shortly calling the general assembly to meet in January.

The future course of the state in the anthracite strike has been carefully mapped out during the past few days and the conferences with Major W. W. Inglis, spokesman for the operators, and President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America, representing the strikers, was to learn the last developments of the two forces to get together for arbitration.

The governor refused to comment on the strike situation today, but officials who have been conferring with him on anthracite matters said he would take an important step within 48 hours.

noon at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer on Wurts street by the Rev. William Nelson, pastor of the church. The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis M. Fitch, was beautifully gowned in blue crepe de chine trimmed with grey fur. She wore a hat to match. She was attended by Miss Mary Kyer of this city as bridesmaid, who was gowned in tan crepe de chine and wore a hat to match. The bridesmaid carried pink roses and the bride a bouquet of bride's roses. The best man was George D. Aley, a brother of the groom. The flower girls were the Misses Mary Lebert and Mary Aley, who were dressed in grey crepe de chine and carried baskets of white roses. Following the ceremony, which was largely attended by relatives and friends, a reception was held at the home of the bride. After an extended honeymoon trip through Maine and Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Aley will reside at No. 7 Lebert street. Both are very popular young folks and have the well wishes of a host of friends.

Millonig-Raichle.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Fredrick Raichle, No. 66 Spruce street, was the scene on Thanksgiving day at one o'clock of a very pretty and interesting wedding, when their daughter, Gladys Anna Raichle, was united in marriage to Henry Millonig, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Millonig, Sr., by the Rev. Wilbur F. Tetley, pastor of the St. James M. E. Church. The ceremony was witnessed by some sixty friends of the bride and groom. The home was prettily decorated with cut flowers and ferns, the ceremony being performed under an arch of smilax and chrysanthemums extending over floral gates which were opened by the little flower girl. During the playing of the wedding music by Miss Ethel Mauterstock at the piano and Kenneth Zeliff, violinist, the following girl friends of the bride formed a ribbon aisle from the stairway to the arch: Miss Mildred Raichle, Miss Effie Morgan, Miss Mildred Larkin, cousins of the bride, Miss Emma Byer, Miss Louise DeGraff, Miss Mary Styles, cousins of the groom. The bride was lovely in a gown of white flat crepe and georgette, wearing a silk net veil caught with orange blossoms, and carrying a shower bouquet of bride roses and swansonia. Her one ornament was a string of pearls, the gift of the groom. She was given in marriage by her father. Miss Grace Southard was the maid of honor. She wore a charming frock of blue baronet satin and carried pink roses. Phillis Brodhead, the sweet little flower girl, dressed in blue crepe de chine, carried a basket of rose petals which she strewed in the path of the bride. Arnold Morgenstern was Mr. Millonig's best man. The bride presented her maid of honor with a silver compact and the groom's gift to his best man was an amethyst tie pin. Following the serving of a fine collation, Mr. and Mrs. Millonig left for Washington, D. C., where they will spend their honeymoon. The bride's going away costume was blue chiffon velvet, with hat to match. On their return they will go to 97 Clinton avenue where a newly furnished home awaits them. Both young people were graduates of Kingston High school, Class of 1924, the bride being considered a musician of much talent. Later she attended the New Paltz Normal school. The groom attended Pratt Institute and is now an engineer in the state highway department. Both bride and groom have a wide circle of admiring friends in Kingston who extend best wishes to them. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and valuable gifts. Four pre-nuptial showers were given Miss Gladys Raichle just before her marriage to Mr. Millonig by Miss Ruth Longyear, Mrs. Brodhead, the Misses Oesterhoudt and Miss Southard, one of the showers being unique in that it was entirely a book shower.

Britain's Homage To Dead Queen

Body of Queen Alexander Placed in Westminster Abbey With Imposing Ceremonies—Archbishop of Canterbury Conducts Ceremonies.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Nov. 27.—Her requiem over, Queen Alexandra rests today with Britain's mighty dead in Westminster Abbey—but not for long. The queen mother's tomb will be in the solemn splendor of St. George's chapel, Windsor Castle, whither the coffin will be carried just before daybreak tomorrow morning for final sepulture in strict privacy.

The public tribute was paid in the Abbey this morning after the funeral pageant had moved from St. James Palace to Edward the Confessor's Minster. This day is grief anointed by England and the Empire to a beloved woman who had moved amongst them as princess, queen and dowager for three and sixty years.

Great and Humble Pay Tribute.

The solemn pomp of ceremonies at the Abbey, in which the Archbishop of Canterbury as primate of the Church of England, was the central figure, was hardly more impressive than the tribute of private tears which welled from the eyes of thousands of Britons of high rank and of no rank at all.

From midnight onward, braving a freezing wind, men and women gathered about Westminster Abbey and in Whitehall.

As the funeral cortege left St James Palace snow began falling from leaden skies depositing a pall of white on the smoke and fog begrimed buildings along the route to the Abbey.

Kings and Princes Follow Coffin.

Kings and princes trudged along behind the coffin of the queen mother in slush, the damp snow bespecking their brilliant military uniforms.

Upon the coffin there rested only a wreath of autumn leaves placed there by King George.

As the procession moved slowly along there came the dull boom of the funeral guns, firing a volley every minute until the procession reached Westminster Abbey.

Many Overcome by Cold.

Hospital corpsmen were engaged tending to those in the throngs who were overcome by cold—many women had to be removed in ambulances.

The service conducted by the Archbishop of Canterbury marked the first part of the public tribute—but again not the most heartfelt. When the great requiem was over and the royal mourners and persons of state had retired the Abbey was thrown open to the public. Then began the solemn file of the public past the coffin which held the frail earthly tenement of the queen mother. It was planned to allow this march to continue until the last one desirous of passing the coffin had paid this simple tribute. Tens of thousands filled Parliament Square and Victoria street waiting for their chance to enter the minster.

Perfection

THELDA KENVIN

Thelda Kenvin, of Brooklyn, has the perfect nose, according to artists for whom she has posed. In general conformity, they say, it is without a blemish.

City Ways

"Patriotism is a good thing, but it should never make a patriot stand up for his country when she is in the wrong."

The speaker was Oswald Garrison Villard, the New York editor.

"Such patriotism," he went on, "smacks too much of a certain milkman.

"'Look here, milkman,' a lady said, 'I don't like your milk.'

"'Oh, you don't, don't you?' said the milkman. 'What's the matter with it?'

"'It's thin and blue, and it never has any cream.'

"'You're from the country, ain't you?'

"'Yes, I am.'

"The milkman gave a sneering laugh.

"'Thought so,' he said. 'Well, after you've lived in the city a while you'll get over them Jay-hawk notions of yours.'"

Breaking With the Past

Bessye Bearden, president of the Women's Democratic league, said in a brilliant New York address:

"Wide horizons open before the modern girl. There's politics, there's the professions, business, everything. But the modern girl makes a great mistake when she breaks with the past altogether.

"An elderly man said to a young man in a kindly voice:

"'You wish to marry my daughter. Can you cook, sew, wash and iron, sweep, darn, nurse children, shop—'

"The young man gave a puzzled laugh.

"'Why ask me if I can do those things?' he said.

"'Because,' said the elderly man, 'my daughter can't.'"

EXPLAINS PLANS TO CHECK EPIDEMIC OF INFLUENZA

Dr. E. O. Jordan of Chicago Tells Health Experts There Is No Certain Preventive.

St. Louis.—Declaring that it is impossible to prevent altogether another epidemic of influenza by methods of quarantine and isolation, Dr. E. O. Jordan, head of the University of Chicago department of bacteriology, discussed the efficacy of various preventive measures before the American Public Health association here.

Practical difficulties in the way of administering efficient vaccination on a world-wide scale during an influenza outbreak seem so insuperable that we can hardly make it the basis of a protective campaign, he said. Face masks, he characterized as having limited applicability. Chlorine and similar gases he dismissed because they have not yet proved of decisive prophylactic value.

"I believe, however," Doctor Jordan continued, "that something can be done to lower the attack rate in favorably situated small groups, to protect some individuals altogether and to lessen the virulence on the part of the accessory microbes. Difficult to apply, and uncertain of success as it may be, the minimizing of contact seems at present to offer the best chance we have of controlling the ravages of influenza.

"It is now clear that the first estimates of the loss of life caused by the influenza epidemic of 1918 were too low. The disclosures of the census of British India of 1921 and other data that have since come to hand make an estimate of 20,000,000 deaths in the whole population of the world probably not wide of the mark. This is comparably the worst catastrophe of the sort that has visited the human race since the black death of the Middle ages.

"Judging by the past nothing is more certain than that we shall some day have another visitation of this destructive infection. It is not to be doubted that if it were to descend upon us tomorrow we would, as public health workers and students of the disease, be little, if at all, better equipped to deal with it than we were seven years ago. It is conceivable, however, that if we occasionally remind ourselves of the gaps in our knowledge we shall be in a position to study more advantageously the manifestations of the disease even in the presence of an epidemic period. There are certainly also lines of direct investigation which can be prosecuted today with some hope of rendering ourselves better prepared to cope with the next epidemic."

Will Harness Tides in the Bay of Funday

Dexter P. Cooper of Eastport, Maine, the engineer who proposed to develop electrical power generated by the rise and fall of the tides in the Bay of Fundy. The estimated cost of the project is between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000, and the engineer expects to generate more than 500,000 horse power.

Sink Wells to Drain Waterlogged Lands

Berkeley, Cal.—Drainage of overirrigated lands by pumping from deep wells is the latest method put into use by farmers of the Pacific coast states in their fight against alkali or waterlogged soil.

Drainage by deep ditches or by tiling had proved to cost $40 to $60 an acre and had usually necessitated formation of drainage districts and issuance of bonds secured by lands which were already part of bond-carrying irrigation districts.

The deep-well pumping system was originated six years ago, and now more than 400 wells are draining nearly 100,000 acres.

The wells are 125 to 200 feet deep and the water is pumped by electric-driven rotary turbines. Each pump will maintain the underground water at any desired subsurface level over approximately 160 acres.

The principal point in favor of the well and pump drainage is that it delivers to the surface water available for irrigation worth more than the current needed to run the electric pumps.

Record Relationships

The record gap between grandfather and grandson is believed to have been a young earl whom Queen Victoria learned was 129 years younger than his grandfather. The grandfather had remained a bachelor until sixty years old, and the boy, the son of a second marriage, was born when his father was sixty-nine years old. The young marquis of Donegal is about eighty years younger than his father, being the son of a third or fourth wife. He may establish a new record in this regard.

Passed, October 27, 1925.

Resolved, that Main Street between Johnston Avenue and Grand View Avenue be graded and paved in accordance with the grade heretofore established and that such grading and paving be done in accordance with the plans to be prepared by the City Engineer and approved by the Board of Public Works

Resolved, that the work required in the foregoing section be done by the Superintendent of Public Works and under the supervision of the City Engineer, under the direction of the Committee on Streets and Sewers of said Board and twenty-five (25%) per cent of the cost of the work be paid by a general tax upon the City and seventy-five (75%) per cent of such cost and expenses be defrayed by a special assessment upon such portions of the real estate in said City bordering on or touching Main Street as the Assessor of said City shall deem to be more immediately benefited by such improvement. That the foregoing improvement is hereby declared to be exempted from the operation of Section 151-A of Chapter 611 of the Laws of 1915.

Resolved, that the sidewalks on both sides of the above mentioned portion of Main Street be curbed, guttered and flagged in accordance with the grade of said street as hereby established.

Resolved, that the sidewalks on both sides of the above mentioned portion of Main Street be curbed, guttered and flagged in the manner following: The curb stones shall be not less than twenty (20) inches in depth nor less than four (4) inches in thickness, the gutter stones shall be fourteen inches in width and at least three inches in thickness. The curbstones shall be set to the established elevation and grade of the street and cut to curves of six feet radius at intersecting streets. The gutterstones shall be laid with a rising inclination of one inch from the curb line toward the center of the street and so the surface of the gutter stone shall be eight inches below the top of the curb.

The sidewalks shall be flagged with sound smooth flagging stones five feet in width, and not less than three inches in thickness, and shall be laid with a rising inclination of one-quarter of an inch per foot from the curb line to the street line.

All curbing, guttering and flagging shall be embedded in sand or equally good material free from clay. Such curbing, guttering and flagging shall be made and completed within thirty days after the service of notice upon the owner or occupant so to do, and if the work be not done and completed within the time above specified the expense of repairing missing grade stakes shall be paid by said owner or occupant and the Board of Public Works may have the curbing, guttering and flagging done at the expense of the delinquent owner or occupants.

Resolved, however, that if any property owner so elects, concrete sidewalks and curb and gutter of approved construction satisfactory to the City Engineer and of the designated width and depths as herein prescribed may be used in place and stead of bluestone.

This ordinance shall be published once in the official papers of the city, and a copy of said ordinance shall be served upon each and every owner or occupant of the portion fronting and abutting on the work to be done.

Resolved, that all ordinances or parts of ordinances inconsistent with the provisions of this ordinance are hereby repealed.

HUDSON BAY COUNTRY

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

HUDSON BAY and its 2,500 miles of coastline are having their annual steamship contact with the rest of the world at this season. Except in the summer months the people of the bay region live to themselves, shut in by ice along their water lanes, and, on the land side, by rough and frozen terrain that the transportation devices of the modern world have not yet conquered.

There are more people and more activity around Hudson bay and its supposedly dreary hinterland than is generally supposed. For two and a half centuries permanent settlements of whites have been maintained along the coast. The first, Rupert House, near the southernmost tip of the bay, was established as a post of the Hudson Bay company soon after that corporation of romantic history came into existence in 1670. Since then the trading posts have grown in number, until nearly a score are scattered along the east and west coasts. At each of the Hudson Bay company posts a Canadian, English or Scotch "factor" is in charge. Assistant factors reside at the larger posts, and many of the officials have families with them. In recent years posts of a rival fur company, Revillon Freres, a French concern, have been established beside the older posts or in entirely new locations, in charge of French managers.

The typical trading post in the Hudson bay country consists of a substantial store stocked with food supplies, fabrics, tools, guns, ammunition and miscellaneous goods; the home or homes of company officials; a church; a few cabins of settled Indians, and perhaps a mission school building where instruction in trades is given by missionaries. At the posts in spring and early summer Indian and Eskimo trappers and hunters gather to trade the furs of their winter catch for needed supplies.

Great Sea Rather Than a Bay.

"Hudson bay" is a misnomer. This huge body of water, 900 miles long and nearly 600 wide, is more than a bay or even a gulf. It is really a great inland sea, an arm at once of the Atlantic and Arctic oceans, which bites deep into the vast bulk of the North American continent. It is one of the most characteristic features on the map of the continent, standing out as strikingly as the Gulf of Mexico and covering almost as great an area.

Early in August of each year steamers belonging to the fur companies, from Newfoundland and the St. Lawence ports, push through Hudson strait north of Labrador and nose their way down into the bay. They are loaded with miscellaneous cargoes of trade goods which they distribute to several of the major posts. There sailboats from the smaller posts meet the steamers, bringing the past winter's accumulation of furs, which are to be replaced by cargoes of trade goods. When the steamers have made their rounds and are ready to steam homeward, they are loaded with furs worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. The visit of the steamers from the outside world is the event of the year at the posts where they touch. The posts are not isolated at other times, however, for there is considerable movement of small boats along the coast in the open season from post to post. Even in winter sledge journeys by dog teams may be made to the nearer posts.

On the map, Hudson bay does not appear to be exceedingly inaccessible from the more settled parts of Canada to the south. The Canadian National railway, extending east and west, passes only 175 miles south of the southern tip of the bay, a distance roughly equal to that between New York and Boston. From Cochrane, one of the stations on the Canadian National, a rail line has been pushed down the Abitibi river, nearly half-way to the bay. It is extremely difficult to construct a railway over the rough, forested wilderness, however, and the completion of the line at an early date does not seem assured. This railway will eventually reach Moose Factory, near the mouth of the Moose river, one of the oldest and most important of the Hudson Bay company posts. Moose Factory gains added importance by the fact that it is one of the few Hudson Bay communities that can communicate with the outside in winter. After the Moose and Abitibi rivers are frozen over early in December they constitute highways along which dog teams sometimes make the trip to Cochrane.

Around James Bay.

The southern 250 miles of Hudson bay is a narrow tongue of water known as James bay. Around James bay the fur trading posts are most numerous and there and in the country farther inland the Indian population gives way to the Eskimos who hunt in much of the country between Hudson bay and Labrador. On the west coast the Indian population persists as far north as Fort Churchill, 900 miles north of James bay.

Civilization has affected very differently the Indians and the Eskimos of the Hudson bay region. The Indians, having adopted the clothing, food and to a certain extent the housing of the whites, without their methods of sanitation, have fallen prey to the diseases of civilization and are rapidly degenerating and dying out. In the face of contacts with the whites the Eskimo has stuck pretty closely to his mode of life, and he is still a competent, upstanding individual, thoroughly able to take good care of himself and his family in his bleak environment. Civilization's chief contributions to him have been firearms and steel traps.

The climate of Hudson bay is very cold in winter. Due to its high tides, however—about 12 feet on the average—the bay does not freeze over solidly, but has large fields of broken ice, with rough ice barriers along the shores. In summer the days become long and hot, and most of the ice has melted by August. Local navigation is possible much earlier. The bay is shallow and heats up rapidly, so that the summer water temperature is higher than that of Lake Superior.

There is good soil around James bay, especially on the east side. It is not improbable that when a railroad penetrates to the southern end of the bay, settlers move in and necessary machinery becomes available, the James bay country may become an agricultural and dairy region. Excellent gardens are grown at Moose Factory, Rupert House, East Main River and Fort George. The vegetables that thrive in these plots are potatoes and practically all root crops, cabbage, lettuce, rhubarb and berries. Oats have been grown successfully at several posts, maturing perfectly. There are no facilities in the region, however, for threshing grain. Grass grows luxuriantly near James bay and in valleys even farther north, and at several of the posts cows and horses are kept. Under the sun of July and August flowers spring up everywhere. It is no uncommon thing to see acres of wild roses, wild sweet peas, violets and other blossoms. The one dominantly important factor in agriculture in this region seems to be to drain the soil adequately.

Whites Live Comfortably.

The white residents at the little fur trading posts of Hudson bay do not live in the rough way that might be supposed. Thanks to transportation through Hudson strait in summer, many of the factors have well-built houses that would not be out of place architecturally in American or Canadian towns. Within are pianos, American and European furniture, well-filled bookcases, paintings, china, silver and linen. Besides canned and bottled goods of every description, the post families have fresh vegetables summer and winter (from their root cellars in the latter case) while fish and wild game are abundant.

Christianity has taken a strong hold on the Indians and some of the Eskimos of Hudson bay. There is a modest little "cathedral" at Moose Factory, the see of a bishop of the Anglican church; and at all of the posts are churches or missions. Not every church edifice has a pastor, but there are several ministers in the region who go from place to place, and in their absence services are conducted by the lay readers. In these posts on the edge of the wilderness Sundays are scrupulously observed. The post store is closed, no journeys are started or work done, and the entire population goes to church. In the south the services are conducted in the local Indian tongue, farther north, in Eskimo. The summer visits of the bishop are events that share importance with the arrival of the annual ship.

So far Hudson bay has played the role of furrier to the world. In the years to come it may add other parts to its repertory. Agriculture, it has been seen, is not out of the question in the south. Three hundred miles north of James bay on the east coast a large river plunges 170 feet almost at the shore line. Undoubtedly there is much water power going to waste behind the great cliffs of the northeastern coast. Some day it may be feasible to harness this power to furnish light and heat and power to the southern settlements. Reconnoissance has disclosed considerable quantities of iron ore and other minerals along the east coast that it may some time be profitable to work—perhaps with the aid of nearby water power.

Hudson bay's greatest opportunity for future service, however, seems to be as a short salt water route to Europe for the grain of the western Canadian provinces. Port Nelson and Fort Churchill, both at the mouths of rivers on the west coast, have been urged as the future great port of the bay. Shortly before the World war this project was being rushed through, and a railway, connecting with the existing system near Lake Winnipeg, was pushing toward Port Nelson. It actually reached within 97 miles of its destination when work was abandoned because of the war. Since peace came funds have been unavailable to resume work, and the track, through northern plain and muskeg, is falling into disrepair. From Regina and points west in the Canadian grain country a rail haul of 1,000 miles or more would be saved by shipping grain through Port Nelson. The project would involve the erection of large elevators on the edge of Hudson bay in which to store grain and dairy products during the winter, for they would have to be ready for a short, strenuous shipping season. Under this plan scores of ships, preferably built to withstand ice pressure during the early and late seasons, would ply in and out of the bay between mid-July and the last of October hauling foodstuffs for England where their predecessors have carried only furs.

The Modern Squaw Wrapped in Her Blanket or Madame in Costly Fur Dreads Not The Cold.

Coats are infinitely more interesting and varied than usual. They are marvels of tailoring and usually sorts of treatments from patches of fur to inlays of contrasting fur or fabric. Great wedge shaped sections help to slenderize the back, the point sometimes hidden under the collar, and sometimes reversed so that it accentuates the back line. Designers seem incapable of leaving the back of even a coat alone this season, and in keeping with the general gayety of nations are rather insistent on coats being startling in color scheme and heavily furred. Just what furs are most fashionable is hard to say for furs have become unrecognizable thanks to the dyers' art and the trick of permanent waving. Shaved furs are used to alternate with long ones, otter is plucked and mistaken for beaver, at the moment one of the desirable pelts, and so it goes. Wild cats and leopards are tamed to society's needs, and any animal is in danger of finding his life not worth the price of venturing to the edge of the forest. All of the newer coats make a point of having collars which stand up at the back rather than lie flat, and coats which are entirely of fur are more frequently made of two pelts than one. The idea of facing on either side of the front to a depth of about five inches with fur, produces a cozy effect which is reversible, the fur being turned back, when desired, thus making full length hands, or turned in when blustery weather makes bundling up an attractive gesture.

Coats for travel or sports are frequently fashioned in border lines being one color above and another below the hipline. The only rule to be sent in the aftermath of the successful ensemble and speak for itself.

THE WHY, WHEN AND WHERE OF FASHIONS.

Necessity is the Mother of Ornamentation.

In a season when everything from one's umbrella handle to slipper heels is covered with as much or as original decoration as possible, it might be interesting to note that ornamentation, in part at least, was derived from efforts to conceal rips and tears and other deficiencies in the fabric of the garment.

An old English tale illustrates the point. Sir Philip Calthrop was one of the first dandies of importance not of royal blood. His shoemaker, John Drakes, was more than a little envious of his handsome client's appearance, and taking note of the name of his tailor, ordered himself a fine costume in similar style. This news reached the ears of Sir Philip, who immediately ordered his gown to be cut as full of slashes as shears could make it. This ruin of cloth so staggered the shoemaker that he vowed to keep his own humble fashion in the future.

But the slashes in Sir Philip's gown were then embellished, cunningly embroidered around and made to sparkle with every device of bead and gilding known at that time. How edges were not practical even in the very dawn of costuming, so each age and generation produced the technical means, new decorative results appeared and—accumulating through the ages are the intricate and marvelous ornaments of today.

Yonkers Easily Beat High School

Grid Team Overwhelmed 70 to 0 on Thanksgiving Day—A Sad Holiday Without a Bright Spot—Kingston's Worst Defeat of the Season.

The Kingston High School football team had a rather sad Thanksgiving Day in Yonkers, Thursday afternoon, the guests of the Gordon High gridiron team which reigned supreme over the extremely muddy and hilly field as it easily scored 70 points on the Kingston outfit while the visitors were held scoreless.

Reports had been issuing from the Yonkers camp that the local's opponents were an outfit of the same caliber as the Maroon and White, having lost every game this season, but it took the Kingston boys only a short time to learn that the information had been far from accurate for by the time the match had been three minutes old, their powerful opponents had scored 18 points.

Never once so far this season had the 1925 aggregation met such opponents who were a man-eating team indeed, being all built like mountains and fast in the fullest sense of the word

The star of the Yonkers aggregation was a big husky by the name of Brown who was a demon on the offense, at one time running past the entire K. H. S. team for a touchdown at the kickoff.

This match ends the Maroon and White's gridiron season, having lost the entire ten games played and being the local's worst defeat of the season.

Newburgh Beat Locals, 14-0

Biggest Crowd of Season Witnesses Fine Game in Tri-County League at Armory Thursday Night.

By keeping the scoring gun of Jack Spaltz's Tri-County League team ineffective in the late minutes of the fray at the local armory Thursday evening, the Newburgh Peerless five snatched the splendid combat from the locals by a score of 14 to 10 before the largest crowd this season.

There was nothing amiss in the line of excitement during the affair, for points were scarce, the Peerless crew holding the Kingston five 4 to 3 at the end of the first half. And points were difficult to gain, for during the first five minutes of the scrap neither team could register a marker. The Peerless aggregation had roped in all of their four markers gained the opening period before the Kingston team made their initial stab. For after about three-quarters of the first period had been completed Johnson made the locals' first register with a double and a few minutes later followed with a single, the Spalt aggregation's total score in the first half

Most of the points were made in the latter period after Van Buren put the locals in front with a sinker, making the score 5 to 4. From then on neither team managed to wander far away from its opponent until the late portions of the second period. After about ten minutes of playing in the latter period the Newburghers jumped ahead for a slight lead which solved the contest.

At this point the Newburgh outfit spurted ahead like a whirlwind, making the four points which gave them the affair in a speedy manner, the two Peerless guards shooting two speedy doubles in a row. Caulfield dropped in the first one and immediately following the toss-up Dell let one more drift through the rings. This put the Newburghers up in front by four points, after which Johnson broke away for a snappy double but the Peerless crew regained its four point lead when Blum sent a double on its way, making the score stand at 14 to 10 for the visitors.

Then the teams finished the affair as it had been started, for the last five minutes of the combat neither teams could adventure close enough to their respective baskets to score again.

Johnson held the scoring honors with six of his team's points, making two fields and as many fouls. The clubs were equally inefficient at the foul line, each making good only four of the sixteen fouls called on their respective teams during the contest. The score:

Port Jervis Heads DUSO League

Port Jervis High School shall again wear the Duso League crown, for in a great contest in Middletown Thursday the Port crew trimmed the Middies 10 to 0 in the contest to decide the league championship. This makes two successive seasons that the Tri-City team has won the title.

McCarthy, the star of the Port outfit made all the points for his outfit, making a touchdown and kicking the placement and booting a goal from the field. It was one of the tightest league matches played this season as the Middies fought to hold the Port aggregation.

Final Standing.

BENNY LEONARD WAS QUICK AT THINKING

Retired Champion May Return to Ring to Polish Off Title Claimants.

Thinking made Benny Leonard the greatest lightweight of his time. Jimmy Goudrich of Buffalo is the lightweight champion of the world in the state of New York. In the Middle West they look upon Sammy Mandell as the king of the 135-pounders. In some parts of New York the fans believe that Sid Terris is the kingpin of the present crop. But, they all admit that not one of the present members of the lightweight division comes close to measuring up to Benny Leonard, who some time ago retired as the undefeated champion, but he may return to the ring again.

What made Leonard such a great fighter that the present 130-pound performers shape up as pigmies alongside of him was that he was a thinker in the ring. He did not pose as a second edition of "The Thinker," Rodin's great statue, as did Jack Dempsey. Nor did he have himself photographed as "The Thinker," as did Mickey Walker. But when it came to actual thinking in the ring, Benny was all over those other two champions.

Some fighters succeed through sheer force, the ability to slug their way through by main force. Dempsey and Walker are of that type. Leonard could punch, too. But there was the power of thought behind his every punch.

The great thinker in the ring is the man who never loses the ability to think clearly. Leonard always had his wits about him. Even though his brain might be reeling, he never lost the power of clear thought.

Scotland Lacks Fields for Pastime of Cricket

Cricket does not flourish in Scotland for two good reasons, in the opinion of a writer in the London Post.

"In the first place, good grounds are few and far between, and bad patches frequent—though we dismiss with indignation the story of a southern visitor who got out to an all-along-the-ground lob, which put up an old and obstreperous cock grouse and so caught him in two minds," he comments.

"Secondly, there is so much 'softness' in the weather that matches are often abandoned, over 50 per cent in the case of a notable club last season.

"Yet the enthusiasm of A. K. Bell of the Orange club—a sort of M. C. C.—is likely to be the beginning of better things. His gift of a ground and pavilion for the benefit of Perthshire cricket may lead to the establishment of a nursery for promising Scottish players, both amateur and professional."

Suburban Will Have an Added Value of $10,000

The suburban handicap at one mile and a quarter, one of the oldest and most sought fixtures of the American turf, will have an added value of $10,000 next year, thus bringing it back to the place it occupied as one of the outstanding features on the spring program of the old Coney Island Jockey club at Sheepshead Bay.

Joseph E. Widener, president of the Westchester Racing association, also has added a new stake to the list. It will be called the speed handicap, and will be run at five and a half furlongs with $5,000 added, making a companion for the Toboggan handicap.

Magnates Favor Earlier Starting Time of Series

A plan to advance the starting time of world's series games from 2 p. m. to 1:30 was favorably discussed at a meeting of major league club owners with Commissioner Landis.

No definite action was taken, but it is understood this change will be recommended for adoption, to be effective next fall. It will chiefly lessen the likelihood of darkness interrupting long drawn out or extra inning games.
